Yum China (9987 HK)

3Q23 result missed and we will stay cautious

3Q23 result was a miss, due to weak demand, slow SSSG and intense competition. We think Yum China has turned more active to gain or at least retain its market share, perhaps at the expenses of lower GP margin and higher opex (e.g. staff costs). But thanks to low valuation (after our earnings cut), we maintain BUY.

- What is new? Yum China (9987 HK) issued disappointing 3Q23 results. Sales rose +9% YoY, missing BBG/ CMBI est. by 4%/ 8%, due to weakerthan-expected SSSG (4% for KFC and just 2% for Pizza Hut) and delivery sales growth. Net profit rose +18% YoY, missing BBG/ CMBI est. by 6%/ 18%, mainly because of more-than-expected promotions and less-thanexpected operating leverage (hence labour and admin costs are higher than expected). Restaurant level OP margin for KFC/ Pizza Hut were at 18.6%/ 12.7%, both are 2.0ppt/ 0.7ppt lower than that of 20.6%/ 13.4% last year. Yum China opened about 500 new stores in 3Q23 and 1,155 new stores in 9M23, still on track to reach its FY23E guidance of 1,400-1,600 new stores.
- Our view: A big miss and outlook is hindered by industry weakness.

 This is a big miss in 3Q23 for both topline (only 4%/ 2% for KFC/ Pizza Hut vs CMBI est. of 5%/ 8%) and bottom line (OP margin was only at 11% vs CMBI est. of 15%). Noted that KFC's restaurant level OP margin finally dropped below the 3Q19 level, unlike the strong improvements in 1H23,

2) 4Q23E could still be under pressure given the weak demand (softening trend during Sep 2023 and 10-1 holidays), even though food costs are under control (aided by product innovation and highly capable supply chain), we still expect to see slow SSSG, higher discounting, less operating leverage (staffs are needed to serve more orders) and less other gains (there were tax and rental reliefs last year),

3) Consumers are now more value cautious and Yum China will roll out the most suitable products for such market. The current ASP should still be higher vs 2019 level and the fall in ticket size (by 5%/9% YoY for KFC/ Pizza Hut) could be explained by lowered delivery mix and increased breakfast sales mix in 3Q23, however, Yum China will certainly widen its product price range (including more products priced below RMB 20/ 50 for KFC/ Pizza Hut) and its categories to capture the more differentiated customer demand nowadays (e.g. Chinese style burger and one-person pizza meals or items). The environment, in our view, could stay promotional for a longer while,

4) Should stay cautious on FY24E, due to weak macro and intense competition, we only expect the sales and net profit growth to be at the lowend of YUMC's FY24E-26E guidance, which are both at around HSD.

Maintain BUY and cut TP to HK$ 435.82. Our new TP is based on 27x FY24E P/E (unchanged), at par with 5-year average. We revised down FY23E/ 24E/ 25E net profit forecasts by 12%/ 29%/ 39% to factor in slower SSSG and less operating leverage. After the recent share price retreat (around 15%), YUMC is now trading at 22x FY24 P/E, not very demanding.
