Anta Sports (2020 HK)

An inline $1 \mathbf{Q 2 4}$ plus an improving outlook

Retail sales growth in 1Q24 was slow, but it was widely expected. We see FY24E growth supported by: 1) healthy momentum in late Mar, 2) an exciting product launch pipeline, 3) further segmentation by Anta in terms of products and store format, and 4) gradual improvement in retail discounts (rather achievable for e-commerce). We maintain BUY and continue to see Anta as our sportswear sector top pick. It is trading at $16 x$ FY24E P/E, undemanding given its turnaround trend.

- The recovery pace may not be linear but we still believe the outlook is positive. While management reiterated their guidance of $10 \%-15 \%$ retail sales growth in FY24E, they do not think the recovery has to be linear. But we do concur with their positive view, supported by: 1) constructive momentum in late Mar 2024, when the retail sales execution rate surged to over $120 \%$, 2) an exciting product launch pipeline (more Olympics-related products in 2Q24E and Kyrie Irving products (mass-market positioned) in 3Q24E and 4Q24E, 3) ticket size and item per ticket could still increase even though the ASP may stay flattish, 4) more segmentation for Anta, e.g., the Champion stores will increase from 40-50 in FY23 to 90 in FY24E, where retail sales growth was decent thanks to improved product designs (e.g., Olympics-related), expansion of categories (e.g., outdoor) and more new store formats (different sets of products and designs to cater to various levels of customers in lower-tier cities), and 5) potential speed-up in store expansion and store upgrades (esp. for FILA, even though they have no plan to open stores in lower-tier cities).
- Retail sales growth in 1Q24 was inline as e-commerce outperformed. Anta/ FILA's retail sales growth was at MSD/ HSD in 1Q24, slowing down from high-teens/ 25\%-30\% in 4Q23, but roughly in line with CMBI est. of 7\%/ $6 \%$. We deem these understandable given the high base last year. In fact, the execution rate was over 100\% in 1Q24; therefore it was in line with the company's guidance. By channel, e-commerce had a strong rebound with $20 \%-25 \% / 25 \%$ growth for Anta/ FILA (the base was high for FILA with over 40\% growth in 1Q23) while offline sales growth was negative (FILA had a small drop in store count YoY). By segment, basketball outperformed with the launches of Kyrie Irving shoes, while running and other categories also enjoyed a decent boost in sales growth.
■ Maintain BUY and TP of HK$101.73, based on 20x FY24E P/E (unchanged), supported by $13 \% / 17 \%$ sales/ NP CAGRs during FY23-26E. The stock is trading at $16 x$ FY24E P/E, around 1.4 s.d below its 5 -year average of $26 x$.

－Retail discounts continued to improve along with the inventory level．Inventory to sales for Anta／FILA was below 5 months in 1Q24，similar to 4Q23，but was the lowest among the last few quarters．Hence the retail discounts for Anta was kind of stable（flattish／small improvement for offline／online YoY）and that for FILA was decent（around 1ppt improvement for offline／online YoY）．For 2Q24E，management believe the base is not high last year and further improvement is reasonably achievable．
